

Students Present Plans to Convention

by Harvey Kolodny
Special to the Daily

Ottawa, Jan. 15 — During the second day of the National Liberal Convention, the Canadian University Liberal Federation presented two resolutions for consideration by the national body.

A resolution expressing CULF's wish to see Red China recognized had already been submitted on Tuesday. It caused quite a stir. As a result, the McGill Delegation was today invited before the Foreign Affairs section of the Resolutions Committee to give their reasons for asking the Liberal Party to urge that Canada recognize the communist nation in question.

The two resolutions presented today both concerned the field of education. Both were met with rousing cheers by the national delegates. The first of these said, in effect, that CULF: believed that Liberalism requires equality of opportunity in education; recognized that the future of Canada depends on the education of our young people; believes that too many people are cut off from a university education by lack of funds; nevertheless upholds the exclusive jurisdiction of the provinces in the field of education. As immediate measures the resolution would, 1. Establish an extensive scheme of bursaries for University students. 2. Supplement the bursaries scheme by the establishment of a national loan fund from which students may borrow, interest free, the money necessary for their education.

The second resolution concerning education was put forward at 9:30 this evening. As with the former, it received rousing applause from the convention and has been forwarded to the Resolutions Committee. It read: (A) Be it resolved that the income tax exemption for students be raised to include the basic tax exemption plus tuition fees. (B) Be it further resolved that the salary a student earns shall not affect the right of his parents or guardians to claim the income tax exemption for him as a dependent as long as the students income does not exceed $1,500.

During the day, nomination speeches were given with Pearson, Martin and Henderson participating. Henderson did little more than to elaborate on what he thought Liberal policy should be, although he did so with very firm conviction.

CULF Treasurer

Stuart Smith of McGill, who had been on Monday elected to Treasurer of CULF, seconded Mr. Henderson's nomination. He did so, and with the backing of the rest of the McGill delegation, on the grounds that every potential candidate with some thing to say had a right to have his ideas presented before the national convention. There were persistent rumours that the "Brass" was attempting to pressure the "dark horses" into tendering their resignation.

Model Council Will Discuss World Problems

Sir Leslie Munro, President of the United Nations General Assembly, yesterday sent a personal message of good wishes to the Model Security Council being held here today, tomorrow, and Saturday.

The purpose of the Model Security Council is to encourage better understanding of international problems by participants and spectators. Students having studied the actual policies of the nations they are representing will utilize their knowledge in the discussion of three resolutions:

1. Creation of agency through which to channel all arms to the Middle East.
2. Establishment of a commission responsible for making outer space exploration a joint human enterprise.
3. Self Determination for Algeria.

To supplement the debates, there will be talks and conferences.

Officials

Mr. Rene Pouliot of the International Civil Aviation Organization will preside over the Council. Chairman of the event and Secretary General is George Schaffer. UN Club President Zafar Khan is Vice-President of the

James Addresses Alumni

Education's Value Must Be Raised

"We must place Sputnik in context" stated Dr. F. Cyril James while addressing the International Alumni Association's closing dinner at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel last night.

"North America, in spite of our complacent self satisfaction during recent years, has never had a monopoly of scientific and technological skill," continued Dr. James and he cited such examples as the invention of gunpowder by the Chinese, and the development of the V2 rocket by the Germans. "Sputnik has demonstrated what we should never have forgotten — that North America has no monopoly of scientific talent. For example two of last year's Nobel Prize winners in the field of science were Chinese" he said.

The race we are engaged in is not solely technological or military. Russia and the United States are the two great powers of our generation. Their political philosophies are in sharp contrast; they are often rude to one another on the radio and at international conferences. Furthermore, Dr. James elaborated that we must catch up with Russia in this race of military technology. This is not, however, our ultimate goal. Our ultimate aim is peace for the whole world — not war with Russia. Following are other highlights of his address.

Understanding

We believe in the possibility of peace, and want to ensure it. But to win peace we need more than the weapons of massive retaliation. We must understand the minds of those with whom we disagree; we must understand their language and their history, their habits and their motives.

Arnold Toynbee has said that the power of the Roman Empire owed more to the desire of the barbarians to be a part, and to copy a civilization that they admired — than it did to the legions. How much are we doing to win the friendship and admiration of the Muslim world, of India, and of Africa — the hundreds of millions of men and women who at this time are not committed to either side of the ideological controversy?

Dr. F. Cyril James

The educational challenge brought home to Canada and the United States is not a simple one. We shall not solve our problems by a "crash-programme" that absorbs more of our scientific talent into missile production and concentrates solely on the training of larger numbers of technologists to help the scientists. We need more than this. We need larger numbers of men and women deeply educated in the fields of humanities and the social sciences.

If we are really serious in our concern, we must develop long range educational programmes and devote to them a large enough part of our resources to make the attainment of success a certainty. We must, moreover, do it now.

Recent soul searching has taught us that education has little

W.U.S. Seminar To Hold Session In Yugoslavia

Two McGill students will have an opportunity to spend next summer in Yugoslavia on a World University Summer Seminar scholarship.

The seminar, which extends over a six-week period, brings together students from Canada and Yugoslavia to discuss Yugoslavia's position in the world today. Students will leave Canada about the middle of June and return around August 12.

The Canadian delegation of 36 students will be financed entirely from government grants, university administrations, and private individuals.

All students interested are asked to leave their name, address, phone number, faculty and year with George at the Tuck Shop in the Union, by Monday, Jan. 20, 12 noon at the latest.

Dancing Girls Sway To Beat Of Drums On Flying Carpet

The sixth annual production of "Flying Carpet", McGill's international variety show, opens tonight at 8:30 for a three day run in Moyses Hall.

The show is presented with the cooperation of the national clubs on campus and features folk songs and dances from many countries. Clubs participating are the West Indian, Spanish, African, Arab, Polish, Russian, and Yugoslavian national clubs as well as the Student Zionist Organization.

Syrian Dancing Girl

Ghana, Ethiopia, and Nigeria will be represented by songs by the African Club. Songs and dances from contemporary folklore, including a Syrian dancing girl are scheduled for presentation by the Arab group. The West Indians will entertain with a steel band, a Caribbean chorus, and a native dance, the Limbo.

International House

The Student Zionist Organization will be presenting folk songs as a tribute to Israel's tenth anniversary, while the national clubs of Poland, Russia and Yugoslavia are cooperating with the McGill Folk Dance Group in the presentation of dances from their homelands.

The purpose of the show is to raise money for the proposed International House which will provide low-cost housing for foreign students. It will be built as near to the campus as possible, and will also serve as a student centre for non-resident students. All profits of "Flying Carpet" will be turned over to the University to be held in trust.

Besides tonight the show will be presented Friday and Saturday evenings with the curtain time 8:30. Tickets, one dollar each, are available at the door.

College Association Warns Government About Interference

The president of the Association of American Colleges has warned the Federal Government to remain out of education, the New York Times reported yesterday.

Dr. J. Ollie Edmunds, speaking before Association officials prior to their forty-fourth annual meeting, which opens in Miami today, demanded an educational program "based on American, not Russian, standards." Association officials joined him in vigorously insisting that the government maintain a "hands-off" policy.

Dr. Edmunds also announced that he would present "a bold and dramatic program" to the Association board of directors calling for increased private and industrial contributions in what he terms "the traditional American way."

Uncle Lou, Uncle Lou,
What Must Liberals Do?

For the last time, Uncle Lou Uncle Lou told us what to do. The Old Warrior of Canadian politics has stepped down as leader of the Liberal Party, but his parting speech was a parting shot. We wonder if the significance of it was realized by the group of festive politicians that crowded the Ottawa Coliseum. Mr. St. Laurent advised the party that he had led to victory during two elections that if they wished to be in power again, they would have to "get close to the people." He suggested that the public had become disenchanted with the aloof "we know what's good for you" attitude that many Liberals had shared, and its policies would have to be revitalized and dramatized before they would once again receive popular acceptance.

This is not new criticism of the Liberal Party, but coming at the time it did come, and from such a figure as Mr. St. Laurent, the indictment is an extremely important one. The Liberals are an old party; and old people are not as inclined to change as younger people. While the Liberals have adapted to shifting currents of popular thought and opinion, they have changed very little for many years, and in politics stagnation is a fatal disease. The Liberals may be in trouble now, more than they realize. They have not a concrete philosophy, or if they have, it is not in a suitable condition for public presentation. No one seems to know what the Liberals "stand for" — least of all the Liberals themselves. If they do not intelligently assess themselves at this Convention, and between now and the imminent general election do some earnest repair work on their sagging platform, then they will once again lose. Politicians more than anyone must have policies and ideals. The Liberals seem to have neither. They are not a potent force now, they are too vague and uncertain. Perhaps a new leader will inspire them to think and then act, perhaps out of popular adversity will come some useful crystallization of their ideas. Public service is a grave responsibility, and in a country which is diverse in people and rich in resources and great in freedom as is ours, then good public service is a challenge and a very difficult task. Politicians must be creative and bold: Mr. Pearson has exhibited these qualities on the international level, Mr. Martin on the national, but so far neither man has combined the two levels of activity to a very satisfactory degree. The new leader will have a lot to learn, and his party too will have a lot to learn. It must learn that it must serve its electors, and must serve them humbly and with not-pompous dignity.

It must indeed "get close to the people", and if it has forgotten how to do this then it will have failed as a political force. These convention days are important days for Canada.

The Open Mouth And The Draft

It seems we can learn to live with anything. Not too long ago, fan magazines were the only things in print that glorified the name of Elvis. But (we suppose) in the spirit of "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," some of the better periodicals are now coming around to a viewpoint that is not only tolerant, but actually approving.

We do not mind in the least that they feel that Elvis has talent. We tend to agree. Anyone who can make millions by executing a bump and grind that would put Gypsy Rose Lee to shame certainly has talent of some sort. We must even agree that "The Pelvis" is supplying a brand of singing that a large segment of the population wants, and possibly even needs.

But we draw the line at this point. Even if the Presley popularity lasts another thirty years, and he becomes internationally famous as the founder and leading exponent of a new art form, we shall never believe that he is basically a simple country boy, who laughs at his audience only unconsciously, and whose gyrations are a natural expression of his primitive virility. It is much easier to believe that Presley is an opportunist merely taking advantage of the principle of supply and demand. His audience obviously likes the quiver and quake routine, and he, therefore, is only too willing to supply it.

Some of the magazine writers taking a second look at Elvis seem to infer that his ultimate ideals are, in fact, typically American. Admittedly, most American men do seem to want big cars and pretty women. But surely that is not all they want. They do not invest all their energies in accumulating fleets of pink and mauve limousines. The nation would be in a poor state if they did.

Let the magazine writers change their minds. Elvis, in spite of delays, has been finally drafted and will soon be off to serve his country in a better way than he has served it in the past. With the periodicals on his side, the Presley controversy may grind to a halt, and the memories of his gyrating torso may fade with it. If that happens, we will be spared the thirty year reign of a new art form.

Letters To The Editor

Agog Theologue

Sir:

I fail to see what point Donald McLean is trying to make in what appears to be a criticism of my article entitled "The Godly Campus" in a column called "THE BLOW-STACK".

If Mr. McLean can offer definite PROOF that my experience as reported is other than "from a divine source", by all means let him do so if he can, and I doubt it. He won't do it by challenging me to theological polemics; I've been through that school of hard knocks many years ago, having travelled about with one of those sects (and their young children who could preach excellently, and irrationally) that bang on doors and try to cram their "gospel" down your throat.

My critic will find that he is fearful and angry about something and is on the defensive, but he knows not why, and this is a poor outlet. He will find that all his Bible-quoting a-la-fundamentalist will bring him up against a blank wall. I can't speak for others, perhaps they live in a uni-dimensional world of logic and find that they can't see any way over that wall; I've learned to jump over it long ago, and I sure hope I can keep going without being stymied by a different kind of "wall".

Mr. McLean is a young man, and has much, very much to learn, and the sheepskin he hopes to get gives him no priority over knowledge, as he will someday find out. The books are on the shelves, let him shoo away the elves, and by the time we both have beards reaching to our toes, "we might know a little more about nothing much", as the Prof. said and knows.

In the meantime, it'll do his health some good if he learned to laugh at life and death even in his sufferings.

Skits O'Freenia

What's That

Charles Kinghorn should take an honest look at his raw materials (2 billion men comprising thousands of dangerous fanatics, millions of sick bodily and spiritually, and the healthy helpless masses) before he draws up his stupid plans.

C.J.B.

From The Outside...

This Is My Sandbox

(ACP) — DAILY CALIFORNIA editors expressed these views on the Outside World:

It is seldom that we are so aroused to wrath that we comment on the Big World Outside.

There is enough, after all, going on in this royal throne of professors, this sceptered isle, this blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this University to fill up these columns.

Besides which, the Outside World, at this point, seems beyond all reform.

However, we cannot let the recent action by the U.S. State department get by without saying SOMETHING.

Report from a local paper: "The State department yesterday sealed off from Russian travelers (agriculturalists, soil scientists, housing experts, etc.) another 45,000 square miles of the United States — an area including San Francisco, Richmond, and all of Stanislaus county. The diplomatic maneuvering was in retaliation for similar steps taken by Russia last August."

In other words, if little brother Linus won't let us have a cookie, we'll kick him in the shins.

Just because Russia is stupid, does that mean that the United States must be equally stupid? Just because Russia is trying to close all paths to future peace, does that mean that we have to help her set up the roadblocks?

Notice that the State department edict does not seal off the University from Russian visitors. It doesn't have to. The University was sealed off in another edict last year.

Russians can still visit Stanford university, however. If they can get there, that is. The entire area around Stanford has been sealed off.

How are we going to have some kind of an international understanding if two children are going to start playing "keep out of my sandbox"?

Both Russia and the United States are once again taking gigantic strides toward that beautiful day when this poor old earth will become one big mushroom cloud.

EUROPEAN TOUR

Through arrangement with a touring agency, the SEC has obtained special rates for students interested in going on tours of Europe this summer. These special rates are only available, however, if a minimum of 25 students indicate an interest in the plan. For those interested, and wishing additional information, a meeting will be held on Friday, January 17th, at 1 pm in the Walter M. Stewart Room of the Union.

Change of Course
Period Announced

The change of course period for the second term will extend from January 15 to January 24. During this period students in the faculty of Arts and Science may change their registration in second term courses for which second term courses only, so that they may drop a second term course for which they registered originally and replace it by another second term course.

'FOCUS ON AFRICA' STAGED BY MCGILL STUDENT GROUPS

"Focus on Africa", a programme sponsored by W.U.S., the African Students Association and the U.N. club, will be held on Wednesday January 22nd in the Union. On Thursday January 21st an exhibit of African skins, masks, carvings, weapons and fetiches will be opened in the Union Lounge for two days. These articles have been collected from the Redpath museum, "Le Petit Musée" and from private collectors.

The programme of "Focus on Africa" will start at 6:30 pm with an African dinner in the grillroom of the Union. The meal will consist of ground-nut soup, a Ghanaian specialty, and a very highly spiced chicken dish, Ethiopian style, with rice followed by a banana dessert from a Nigerian recipe. As well, a special Ethiopian beer will be brewed for the occasion.

"The Democratic Dilemma", a discussion on problems of democracy in plural societies in Africa by Timothy Porteous and Bernard Chidzero, will follow. Porteous, a fourth year law student from the U. of M. was one of the three McGill W.U.S. scholars to Ghana last summer, while Chidzero is an M.A. student from Southern Rhodesia, specializing in African affairs, at McGill. Indians Edge Out N.D.G. Leafs 8-7

by Spencer Nadler

The McGill Intermediate hockey team remained undefeated today as they edged out an 8-7 victory over N.D.G. at the McGill Winter Stadium.

Wide open hockey was the order of the night as the score well indicates. N.D.G. scored two quick goals around the two minute mark in the first period to take a 2-0 lead.

The Indians retaliated as the period drew to a close when Gordie Merrit blasted a sizzler into the upper left hand corner of the net from 10 ft. out to end the scoring for the first period.

Dick White started proceedings in the second period as he deflected a screen shot past the McGill goalie, Bill Young, to give the N.D.G.'ers a 3-1 lead.

Scoring Spree

Beginning a four goal in 2 minutes avalanche was McGill's Pat Morrow with a thirty-footer assisted by the controversial Ivan Sanders. 15 seconds later Steve Molson worked the puck in close and scored from point blank range.

Pat Morrow, then tallied for a second time within 25 seconds of his first goal.

Gordie Merrit rounded out the four goal splurge less than a minute later. Stickhandling beautifully, he weaved his way in and completely fooled the Leaf's goalie, with a soft dribbler that trickled through his legs.

Before the period ended, Tom O'Reilly and Don Anderson each put one past Young to tie the score.

At the three minute mark, of the 3rd period, speedy Al Robinson found the upper right hand corner of the Leaf's net to tally for the first of his two points.

N.D.G.'s Barry Delisle soon tied the score at six a piece.

Robinson then scored his second of the evening on a pass from Merrit to push the Indians ahead, but N.D.G. came back to even it up with a goal by Steve Fournelle.

The winning goal came in the dying moments of the game as Steve Molson put the puck in for a second time.

Although 7 goals were scored against him, Bill Young played a great game and made some spectacular saves that made the difference in the game.

On Education

prestige in our society. We do not, like Russia, give special honour in our society to the man who has a high academic degree, nor in a material vein, do we pay him more than the fellow who failed out of college. Neither in schools nor in colleges do we emphasize the selectivity of talent, weeding out the ablest and ruthlessly excluding those who have less talent, or less desire for hard work.

Many splendid proposals have been made to strengthen our educational system — but in a democracy these can only be implemented when strong and outspoken public opinion supports them.

Dr. James also maintained that our educational system has some qualities which fall in line with the strengths in our patterns of life which we must recognize and strive to preserve.
